N. Paddock

When the officers having in charge Mc-Sloy came to Connellsville last night the funeral party of Paddock were just leaving the Baltimore and Ohio station and at least 500 people were there as spectators. There was great excitement and talk of lynching was heard on every hand. A meeting was held at what is known as the Old College, and was attended by about 300 strikers. It was decided to meet at night at Oliver, a short distance north of Uniontown, and at midnight start for Frick's Brownfield works, where it was in-tended to attempt a start this morning. The authorities are prepared for them. At the court house guards swarmed in the sheriff's office, loading guns and rifles for the expected encounter. A fight will likely occur, as the sheriff will not allow the strikers to trespass on the company's prop-

LONDON, April 7 .- The Times says it is understood that at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet the discussion was devoted to anxious consideration respecting the political outlook. After the events of the week the ministers can no longer conceal from themselves the fact that disaster may overtake them at any moment.

The radicals, feeling that dissolution cannot long be delayed, will insist upon a definite statement as to the government's policy in regard to the house of lords. Inasmuch as the decision of the government to demand the whole time of the house on Tuesday was taken with the full knowledge that the step would evoke a public protest from the radicals, the belief is freely expressed in the lobby of the house of commons that Lord Rosebery is riding The Standard publishes a similar state-

YOUNG FALES RESENTENCED. The Boy Murderer of Newark Sent to the Scaffold.

NEWARK, N. J., April 7 .- The boy murderer, Robert Alden Fales, was, this morning, resentenced to death for the murder, three years ago, of Thomas Haydon, a messenger. He was then sixteen years of age. The date fixed is Thursday, May 10. Fales heard his sentence without emotion. His counsel will go before Governor Werts, at Trenton, on Thursday, and make applica-tion to have the court of pardons commute

Thomas Haydon was on his way from the bank to the office of the Potter hat factory, at Newark, having in his possession $500, when he was waylaid by Fales, who struck him down, killing him. Young Fales secured the money and disappeared He was soon afterward arrested and then he con-fessed.

A HEAVY SENTENCE.

A Clergyman Who Has Been Violating

The pension bureau is today advised by Special Examiner J. F. Fitzpatrick, Chattanooga, Tenn., that Rev. C. W. Lewis has been sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty-eight years for a number of violations of pension laws and that nine other claimants in pension cases sentences have been given from one to two years each. Rev. C. W. Lewis was a member of a regiment of colored troops during the late war and has been prosecuting pension claims throughout east Tennessee, parts of Missouri and Mississippi. He has filed a number of claims, many of them manufactured from false affidavits, with claim-ants personating either the soldier himself or the widow of the soldier.

The adventures of McLennan, the dispensary constable, in the recent troubles in this section read like a page from a dime novel Mr. McLennan has had a GENERAL MARKET REPORTS varied and exciting career within the past week, and the only objection to idealizing him as a hero of a blood-and-thunder story is that he has departed from the course pursued by gentlemen of his ilk. Lordon's depression our market opened charged with murder.

night, when, on the platform of the little and commission houses feel warranted in depot at Darlington, McLennan started the memorable battle by shooting Frank Norment. The victim died instantly. In the skirmish that followed McLennan was shot in the side and fell. McLennan could much business as ever. This is all conducted in the shanties behind the tall fence east of the car track, and this morning there snot in the side and fell. McLennan could not run, and he crept up to the dead men and stretched himself across Frank Norment's feet, closed his eyes and feigned death. In a few minutes the citizens rushed to the spot. One of them pressed his rifle against McLennan's temple and was about to fire, when a doctor suggested that it would not be the right thing to shoot a dying man, and said he was cergroes are taking possession of Rosslynn, at the Virginia end of the free bridge, and it shoot a dying man, and said he was cer-tainly dying. It is against South Carolina chivalry to fire into a man after he is down, and the party passed on after the While the Virginia authorities are doing of law and getting the offenders in the toils, the Georgetown police are still active, and the players are having a hard time of it.

Jesse Brown was the only person arrested. He is a young colored man, and Policeman Bradley remembered his frequent visits over to the policy shops.

Several days ago Jesse made two trips across the river. In the morning he went over and played $1 on hat row for a Georgetown man, but did not make a hit, and he was sent over on a similar errand in the afternoon. This time he played poker, so it is said, and the row came out. Georgetown man, but did not make a hit, and he was sent over on a similar errand in the afternoon. This time he played poker, so it is said, and the row came out. The man who sent him lost $90 because of his fallure to play the row.

This morning Jesse was in Judge Kimball's court as a suspicious person.

Policeman Bradley gave evidence against the prisoner, and Judge Kimball inquired what the Virginia authorities were doing about these men. man who was about to shoot him. All that night it was feared they might lynch him, but it happened that all of the men folks were riding after the escaping sples.
"I don't like to lie in jail waiting for a passel of men to come and lynch me," nalvely remarked McLennan the next morning. "Tain't 'tall pleasant."

The people in authority did not want any lynching at Darlington, so they concluded lynching at Darlington, so they concluded next morning to get McLennan out of the way. He was shaved, dressed in a different suit of clothes, given a slouch hat, and in the middle of the day walked calmly out of jail, through a crowd of farmers around the court house square, and stepped into a buggy that was waiting for him. He was told to drive through the town leisurely and take a certain route up the country. When he got out of town he quickened his pace. "I thought that old mule never would get away from that town," said McLennan.

"Seemed laik to me he just lift one foot and then put it right back in the same track again." But notwithstanding sandy roads and a slow mule, he got away before his escape was discovered, and for the next few days he lay low in a farm house on the Peedee river, eating cornbread and buttermilk and regaling the neighbors with his moving adventures by field and flood.

The next appearance of McLennan is before the coroner's jury, where he appeared yesterday, and before testifying laid down two big navy revolvers, which he had handy in case of trouble. He had come to Darlington this time under a military guard, but he did not sit near open windows, and kept his eves on the door. prisoner.

The cause of Lonon, he winds up in jail, just one week from don's weakness was attributed to local the commencement of his adventures, political influences, and not to any mischarged with murder.

This story commences with last Friday lative properties. Traders are still bullish, ing, and in almost every instance prices were restored before the hour ended. The almost uninterrupted advance in prices during the week gave way very naturally to realizing by the room during the last hour. In consequence of the general desire not to carry stocks over until next week final figures reflected a falling off in price, ranging from 1-2 to 1 per cent. Many would-be purchasers are holding off in anticipation of a further reaction, which, under ordinary conditions, would be warranted at this time. The prevailing low rates for money and the great dearth of first-class investments make reactions a trifle more uncertain than usual.

Prevailing monetary conditions do not

Prevailing monetary conditions do not warrant any material concessions from the present level of values, although there will be momentary breathing spells, in which the shrewd operator will duplicate his holdings and add fresh impetus to the upward move-

Delaware and Hudson officials have been given the assurance that the Vanderbilt interests will support the proposition to issue the new stock at par and vote for the re-election of the present management. This makes it necessary for the interest

This makes it necessary for the interest favoring the issuing of new stock at 75, to buy the stock in open market in sufficient amounts to give them a standing at the meeting soon to be called to discuss this subject. It is hardly likely that the latter course will be resorted to, leaving the probabilities decidedly in favor of the Vanderbilt position. The price of the stock gained 1 per cent to 144, but lost it on later trading. Chicago Gas was the most active feature

Chicago Gas was the most active feature of the day, going up on good buying to 65 1-4, a gain of 1 per cent, but the appearance of a large block of selling orders in the last hour put the price off 2 per cent. General Electric was improved 1 3-8 per cent on liberal purchases, and held well in the face of the later weakness in the general lifety. Sugar gained 1 1-8 per cent during the first hour, but closed with only a net gain of 1-4 per cent. This stock is believed to be on the verge of renewed activity, in which

The bank statement was unexpectedly good in view of the satisfactory increase in loans. The loss of over $1,000,000 in lawful money is due to the payments made to the subtreasury on account of the Cherokee bonds. The increase in deposits is due to the expansion in loans, and for a similar reason the reserve shows a decrease.

The statement in detail is as follows: Reserve decreased $2,802,175, loans increased $6,627,890, specie decreased $561,200, legals decreased $552,800, deposits increased $6,752,700, and circulation decreased $69,200,
